High Level Overview

WHO? Anyone looking to learn more about data collaboratives and how they work, or looking to learn more about Opportunity Youth in Detroit

WHAT? An interactive report detailing our findings from the Opportunity Youth Research Project, including observations about how data collaboratives work and sample data

WHERE? The data that we specifically collected about Opportunity Youth focus on Detroit, but the project can benefit anyone interested in data collaboratives in any geography

WHY? To share the findings from our research in a more approachable and interactive format

HOW? We created this as an ArcGIS Online Story Map, to embed links, graphics, and data that describes our process and findings

How to Use This Tool

This tool follows a narrative format that is very easy and intuitive to operate. Start from arcgis/viuLL0

To navigate the report, just scroll down to view additional sections and findings.

Near the bottom, there is an interactive mapping application embedded that can be used to explore some of our data findings. There are three tabs:

- Served: This tab provides information on where opportunity youth who were serviced by our partners at the time of the project live.

- Estimate: This tab provides rough estimates for where all opportunity youth 16-19 years old live in Detroit

- Comparison: This tab provides information on potential gaps in service – identifying where fewer Opportunity Youth are served in comparison to the estimate of how many there are.

On each tab in the map, you can click on a particular zip code to see specific data. You can zoom in and out using the icon on the upper-left hand corner, and scroll through the legend on the left-hand side to see what the colors mean for each map.
This Storymap also includes a link to a network map that lays out the Opportunity Youth ecosystem. Access from the bottom of the “Mapping the Ecosystem” section by clicking the link or the “Explore” button.

This network map displays organizations in Detroit that serve Opportunity Youth, organized by category. You can learn more about an organization by clicking on its circle on the map. Some organizations work in multiple areas, so they will appear in more than one place on the map.
